At the ministerial daily media briefing the Education Secretary, Gavin Williamson, made it clear that the government had not set a date for when schools and other educational settings will be fully open again. He described additional online resources that were being made available to help students and their parents continue with learning whilst they are at home. He highlighted:

- The opening of the Oak National Academy which is available online now. It is an online classroom and resource hub for teachers, built by teachers - a weblink is at A4;
- An enhanced BBC Bitesize for students and parents – a weblink is at A5.

The Coronavirus Job Retention Scheme is now live. A weblink is at B88 and contains step-by-step guidance for employers on how to make a claim to HMRC for furloughed workers.

Work continues to bring back stranded UK citizens from around the world with special charter flights taking place this week from Bangladesh and New Zealand.

Lord Deighton, former London Olympics 2012 chief executive, has been appointed by the government to lead the national effort to produce much-needed personal protective equipment.
