D. Commentary

The 5pm ministerial briefing was led by Matt Hancock, the Health & Social Care Secretary, who announced that the number of reported daily deaths had reduced to fifteen – the lowest number since 15th March 2020. Weekend recording and reporting of COVID-19 deaths - confirmed by a positive test – has been consistently characterised by lower numbers, but the overall downward trend is evidence that the spread and impact of the virus across the four nations is falling. This is supported by data showing that on average less than one in 1,700 people in the UK are estimated to have the virus, down from one in 500 just four weeks ago.

There are around 2.2 million people in England with underlying severe health conditions who have been advised to 'shield' - to stay at home and avoid non-essential face-to-face contact. These are people of all ages with specific medical conditions who are at greater risk of severe illness from COVID-19.

Mr Hancock announced that from Monday, 6th July 2020, all people shielding from COVID-19 will be advised they can spend more time outside their homes. He explained that further easing of restrictions will mean that:

- Existing advisory guidance can be relaxed for all clinically extremely vulnerable people across England;
- Those shielding can gather in groups of up to six people outdoors and form a 'support bubble' with another household; and
- The government shielding support package will remain in place until the end of July 2020.

From Saturday 1 August, existing guidance will be further relaxed so that clinically extremely vulnerable people will no longer be advised to shield. Support will continue to be available from NHS volunteers and local councils, and people will retain their priority status for supermarket delivery slots. They will also be able to get assistance with shopping, medication, phone calls and transport to medical appointments.

Mr Hancock explained that the government will shortly be writing to all individuals on the Shielded Patient List with updated information on shielding advice and ongoing support.
